REQUISITE BOOKS:

Books you will need (and are in UMass bookstore):
1. W.E.B. Du Bois, The Souls of Black Folk ("Du Bois") [There are many different editions of this book. The page numbers I have given you are from the Dover edition, which is the least expensive edition and is the one in the UMass bookstore. But you can easily figure out what the reading is no matter which edition you have.]
2. Amy Gutmann (ed.), Multiculturalism ["Gutmann''] [you won't need this until later in the course]

[These books are also on reserve at the Reserve Desk at Healey Library.]

Course website:
Course material other than books will be posted on the course website. The site will have all course readings not in the books; announcements; assignments; handouts; this syllabus, and other materials related to the course. You should check the website regularly and especially if you miss class. The URL of the site is: http://www.BlumPhilosophy.com. The course is listed on the left, under “current courses.” Readings are listed by which class (“class 3,” “class 10,” etc.) they are to be read for, rather than by the date of the class.

Almost all readings on the website will also be on Electronic Reserves (marked “ERes” on the syllabus), accessible on the Healey Library website. (If you are not familiar with the ERes system, let me know.) Try accessing it at: http://docutek.lib.umb.edu/eres/courseindex.aspx?&page=instr. The password for the course is “identities.”

You should download all readings for your personal use. You must bring readings to class on the day they will be discussed.

COURSE GOALS

1. Content:
   a. To gain a greater understanding of ideas and concepts that are frequently used but not well-understood in contemporary public discussion about multiculturalism—especially the concepts of "race," "ethnicity," "panethnicity," "racial identity," and "ethnic identity."
   b. To understand some of the philosophical foundations for different and divergent opinions on questions of assimilation, ethnic and racial identity, "mixed" identities, in-group solidarity among ethnic and racial groups, the value of cultural pluralism, and respect for cultural groups.

2. Skills:
   a. To learn to think analytically about emotionally charged and socially important topics.
   b. To learn to write more clearly and more analytically about personally and socially significant issues of race, ethnicity, and identity.
   c. To learn to express yourself in class on charged issues of race and ethnicity. To learn to monitor your own contributions so that you take an appropriate amount of time speaking in class, recognizing that the class benefits from maximal participation from all students.
   d. Developing your ability to listen to and learn from other students with different experiences and different points of view on these topics.

Academic honesty:

I know most students are honest and are here to learn. But academic dishonesty and plagiarism carry severe penalties. The University’s detailed rules for academic honesty are stated in the Student Handbook (under “Academic Honesty,” part of the “Code of Student Conduct”), summarized at http://www.umb.edu/life_on_campus/policies/code/ (Scroll down to “VI: Academic Honesty”) Penalties for cheating normally range from failing the assignment through failing the course, but they can also include suspension or expulsion from the university.

Disability: If you have a disability and feel you will need accommodations in order to complete course requirements, please contact the Ross Center for Disability Services (Campus Center, UL room 211): 617.287.7430; ross.center@umb.edu. When you have authorization from the Ross Center, please see me as soon as possible to work out appropriate accommodations.
